Dear Nondini Hussain,

While I was going through the Opinion Page of your Satrong, I could find a writing of Ms.Jenny Chowdhury, wherein she has so kindly and openly acknowledged being impressed & motivated by my writings. Though I have every doubt if my writings are at all that worthy to read, it was a pleasure to see that she could find my writings good enough. It was her politeness to mention my name as a motivator for improving her writing style with a view to make those appealing to the readers. Truly she writes very good which I have sincerely appreciated many a times in my comments in your Site on her articles.

In fact, through my writings I maintain the only objective to bring awareness in the mass people for putting a full-stop to all types of atrocities and torture, both physical and mental, caused to the women-kind and motivate all readers to honour the women as fellow human-being and protect their equal right by acknowledging their contributions to society and also in all stages of life.

With a view to this, I never intended to maintain any sort of copy-right of my writings and ideas. When Ms.Jenny approached me to allow her to use any part of my writings or borrow ideas or give reference to my writings in her articles, I was too happy to permit her so. Because my ultimate objective is to create awareness to all, may it be through anyone with good intention.

I have given her my permission, and it is really a pleasure to see that she has prudently & judiciously used the permission for noble causes. Though she already maintains a very good quality & style in her own writings, earnestly I wish that she will improve her style and quality in coming days.

I wish her all success.

Sincerely Yours,

Md. Abdus Salam
