

28.12.2005

Nondini Hussain,
Editor, Satrong

With deep interest I read the articles of Jenny Chowdhury whenever those are posted in your web page. She has a classic and unique style of bringing out in the light many problems silently faced by millions of women around the globe.

What she frankly narrated in her writings really need a steel nerve to speak.

I have personally seen a good number of women being inhumanly tortured and tormented by the female members of their in-law's families, but they dared not open their mouth apprehending further torture inflicted upon them.

With honest and open mind if we try to understand the humiliation and atrocities caused to a class of women by another class of women, we have no option but to agree with what Jenny have narrated with courage and determination.

I understand from her articles that Jenny has a very soft heart for the sufferers with steel-hard will-force and sympathetic approach for raising awareness among the people with an objective of stopping the atrocities caused to women.

This morning I had the opportunity to read Jenny's latest but so well written article on " Nari Nirjatone Narir Bhumika - 3 " in your web page. She must have a zeal and mission to do something good for the women-kind, otherwise she would not have taken the trouble of focusing her observations on such a sensitive issue.

She has, concisely but in a deeply penetrating manner, probed into the inner nature of lascivious men and the ill-luck inflicted upon the helpless women only for satisfying the immoral lust of such men-folk. She has also described the role a class of greedy and mischievous women responsible for calling upon so painful and abominable torture upon another class of ill-fated women. This is really painful and heart-breaking.

As a member of male clan, I would admit that I personally can feel the sexual urge embedded deep inside me and personally agree with the observations of Jenny.

But I wonder how she could so distinctly narrate the character of lustful men !!

I fully agree with her that if men can bring their sexual urge under control, and the women can fully understand their social responsibilities with dignity and honour, definitely the wretched women could be relieved of undergoing such torments and sexual harassments in every sphere of the world.

I understand that many people may not agree with my views, but then it is my personal feelings without malice to others. I regret, if I offend anyone in my comments.

I would like to thank Jenny for such a wonderful article and hopefully wish that we bring awareness within ourselves and let the women live a respectable & peaceful life being proud life-partner of men in every way of activities. I wish that she continues writing such wonderful yet reforming articles in future in your web page.

Lastly I would thank you personally for placing such a nice article in your web site.

I earnestly wish that your web site help building a peaceful and progressive society for the human race irrespective of gender and class.

With thankful regards,

Md. Abdus Salam